

WHAT LINGERS

here are places the world forgets. Not through time or chance, but through silence—heavy, deliberate silence that settles like dust over memory, over names, over grief. Saint Hieronymus Monastery was once such a place. Tucked in the hills beyond the reach of rail or road, it served as a haven for those seeking peace, penance, or oblivion. Decades ago, it fell silent. No letters, no pilgrims, no word. The world moved on, and most forgot.

But you did not forget. You couldn't. Because someone you once loved—someone you still remember—was there when the silence began. And now, an envelope has arrived. No return address. Just your name, written in a familiar hand that time should have erased.

Inside: a yellowed prayer card bearing the name Abbot Rian, a brief message: "Come. Something remains. It must not."

The road to Saint Hieronymus is overgrown. The monastery stands still beneath a grey sky. No birds sing. The gates are open.

Some silences are chosen. Others are imposed. This one—whatever it is—has waited for you.

What lingers in the silence... and what will it take to bring it to light?

What Lingers is a mystery of atmosphere and memory, intended to unfold slowly and build toward a climactic confrontation. Players arrive at the abandoned Saint Hieronymus Monastery, drawn by personal ties to those who vanished decades ago. The silence they encounter is not merely the absence of sound—it is a force, pervasive and oppressive, one that resists being broken.

SCENARIO OVERVIEW

Tone: Gothic horror, spiritual decay, emotional weight

Setting: Saint Hieronymus Monastery — a remote, long-abandoned spiritual retreat frozen in silence

Structure:

- Act I – Echoes Before the Silence: The characters meet at a rural waystation; they discover their shared summons and personal connections to the monastery
- Act II – A Silence That Should Have Passed: Arrival at the monastery; unnatural silence; signs of lost lives
- Act III – What the Stone Remembers: Exploration and hallucinations; discovery of the Campana Silens
- Act IV – The Thing That Waits: Confrontation with the Eyeless Abbot; ringing the Bell; final combat

Recommended Players: 2-4

Playtime: 2-3 hours

Key Themes: Memory, silence, spiritual erosion, the persistence of grief

Main Threat: The Eyeless Abbot — a spectral monk whose silence consumes names, voices, and identity

Key Item: Campana Silens — a sacred funerary bell that must be rung to make the Abbot vulnerable

The scenario is divided into four acts:

- Act I introduces the players and their shared connection to the monastery.
- Act II immerses them in the eerie stillness of the monastery, where they begin to experience the effects of the silence.
- Act III leads them into the crypts, where they confront echoes of the past and discover the Campana Silens.
- Act IV culminates in a confrontation with the Eyeless Abbot, where they must ring the Bell to break his hold over their memories.

Each act tests different facets of play—emotional resilience, problem-solving, and tactical cooperation—culminating in a single boss battle where success hinges on recovering what was lost: identity, remembrance, and the power to speak one's truth aloud.

THE PREMISE

Decades ago, Abbot Rian led the monks of Saint Hieronymus in a dangerous spiritual experiment. Obsessed with the idea of achieving divine purity through silence, he performed a ritual intended to sever worldly identity and bring the brothers into perfect spiritual stillness.

At the centre of the rite was the Campana Silens, a funerary bell traditionally used to preserve memory and guide souls to rest. Rian reversed its purpose—twisting the sacred toll into a metaphysical anchor that would bind the monks to silence, preventing both speech and spiritual passage. The rite succeeded—terribly. The monks were erased. Only their robes remained.

Rian himself became the Eyeless Abbot, a spectral presence held together by silence and grief. He is no longer truly human. The monastery has remained untouched ever since, locked in a state of unnatural quiet. The letter that summoned the players may have been sent by a fading fragment of one of the monks—or by the Bell itself. The silence is fraying. Something within still remembers.

To lay the Abbot to rest, the players must find and ring the Campana Silens—risking collapse, confrontation, and the return of names long buried.

THE LETTER

Each player begins the scenario having received a letter—plain, yellowed, and sealed with cracked red wax. There is no return address. Only their name is written on the front, in handwriting they each recognise intimately: a parent, a sibling, a grandparent, a lost lover. Someone who disappeared without a trace, many years ago.

Inside the envelope is a prayer card from Saint Hieronymus Monastery, bearing the name Abbot Rian and a half-faded devotional inscription. Alongside it, a simple note:

Come to the monastery. Something remains. It must not.

The letter offers no explanation, yet the handwriting is unmistakable—and impossibly preserved. Whether out of longing, guilt, curiosity, or fear, the characters set out for the hills where Saint Hieronymus stands in ruin. No traffic goes that way. The path is overgrown. The air feels thinner the closer they get. The monastery gates stand open, and the world behind them falls silent.

ACT I – ECHOES BEFORE THE SILENCE

Before the players ever glimpse the monastery, they are drawn together by a shared summons—and a shared absence. This act sets the emotional foundation: grief unspoken, memory unresolved. It offers space to form connections and feel the first tremors of unease.

SETTING: THE LAST WAYSTATION

The journey begins in a rural village or isolated coaching inn—the last inhabited stop before the road to Saint Hieronymus disappears into mist and overgrowth. The air is chill and damp. Locals speak little of the monastery. Some seem

WHO SENT THE LETTERS?

The letters that summoned the players to Saint Hieronymus Monastery have no clear origin—and that is intentional. The handwriting belongs to loved ones long lost, yet the paper is pristine, the ink fresh. No mundane explanation fits.

The truth is this: the letters were sent by a lingering spiritual fragment—a faint echo of one of the monks who resisted the rite. His name is lost, his voice long silenced, but some ember of will remained. Drawn to the players by threads of memory and grief, this presence reached across the veil through the only tool it had left: the Bell.

The Campana Silens remembers. Though corrupted, it still resonates with the identities it once preserved. Through it, the spirit crafted the letters—not as messages, but as echoes of personal connection, imitating the handwriting of the loved ones each character lost. The Bell called out, and those who still remembered... heard.

GMs may choose to reveal this secret during the climax or leave it unsaid. The ambiguity strengthens the tone—some truths are better left incomplete.

RELEVANT SKILLS

This scenario emphasises emotional, investigative, and spiritual challenges over physical ones. Only one combat skill—Fight—is used, and only during the final confrontation. Most skill use centres around resisting silence (as a spiritual attack), uncovering forgotten truths, and interpreting haunting illusions.

MENTAL AND EMOTIONAL

- Empathy — Connecting with echoes, emotional projections, or grieving spirits.
- Focus — Holding concentration in hallucinations or performing spiritual attacks. Focus is used for spiritual combat in this scenario.
- Insight — Understanding visions, illusions, or lost memories.
- Lore — Interpreting the monastery's history, rites, and the Bell's purpose.
- Will — Resisting psychic pressure, spiritual erosion, and identity loss. Will is used to resist spiritual attacks in this scenario.

SOCIAL AND INTERPERSONAL

- Etiquette — Recognising religious traditions or sacred customs
- Persuasion — Calming others or convincing hesitant allies

PERCEPTUAL AND INVESTIGATIVE

- Awareness — Noticing details, spiritual distortions, or vanishing sounds
- Investigation — Examining rooms, deciphering inscriptions, finding hidden relics

PHYSICAL

- Athletics — Dodging debris, climbing, moving in collapsing areas (Act IV)
- Fight — Captures all types of ranged and melee combat. (Used only during the final act, once the Abbot becomes vulnerable)

SKILL HIGHLIGHTS BY ACT

- Act I – Insight, Empathy
- Act II – Awareness, Focus, Will, Lore
- Act III – Lore, Empathy, Insight, Will
- Act IV – Fight, Focus, Will

to have forgotten it entirely; others go silent at its mention.

Each character arrives with a letter in hand. One by one, they realise they are not alone. Through handwriting, names, or the weight of shared grief, they begin to uncover what binds them: someone they loved once walked the monastery path—and never returned.

MECHANICAL FOCUS

This act is roleplay-heavy with minimal skill checks. Use Insight, Empathy, or Lore for interactions with villagers. Set the tone with subtle unease: a candle that flickers against the wind, a remembered voice, a shadow that lingers too long.

SCENES AND OPTIONS

The focus of Act I is tone and emotional resonance. The players should feel the ache of loss and the mystery of shared summons. It also introduces the party and the world they're stepping into.

POSSIBLE SCENES

- Arrival and Suspicion: Each character enters the village separately. The innkeeper or a wary local reacts oddly—perhaps to the names on their letters.
- Recognition and Revelation: A player recognises the handwriting on another's letter. Shared grief becomes the first bridge between strangers.
- A Shared Past: Players discover their lost relatives once knew each other—or vanished together. A dusty ledger or forgotten trunk may reveal others who made this same journey, and never returned.
- A Warning: A village elder, priest, or traveller mutters a cryptic warning: "That place has been quiet too long. Whatever's there... remembers."

Use this act to foreshadow the monastery's fate and the role of the Campana Silens. The players should not yet grasp the full threat, but subtle references to a bell and silence will seed the tension that blooms later.

HINTS AND CLUES

- The Bell: A villager recalls a funerary bell that once rang from the monastery. No one has heard it in years.
- The Last Toll: An old man remembers the final time the bell rang. "Something changed after that. Like the air forgot how to carry sound."

ENDING THE ACT

The act ends when the players choose to follow the overgrown path together. The wind stills. The trees thicken. And through the mist, the dark silhouette of Saint Hieronymus rises—waiting.

ACT II – A SILENCE THAT SHOULD HAVE PASSED

The players arrive at Saint Hieronymus Monastery. Nestled deep in the hills, it stands as if held outside of time—weathered but unbroken, its gate ajar. The air is motionless. No birds call. No wind stirs. The silence is too complete.

From the moment they step within the grounds, sound begins to change. Footsteps muffle. Whispers vanish. Even breath feels swallowed. The monastery is not merely quiet—it is hungry.

THE LAST VOICES BEFORE THE SILENCE

THE VILLAGERS OF ASHWICK

Ashwick lies in the shadow of Saint Hieronymus. Mist-choked and half-forgotten, its people are wary of strangers and grow uneasy at any mention of the monastery. Those who speak do so with long pauses—as if listening for something before they answer.

MARA WREN

Innkeeper – A hard-faced woman with silverying hair and a gaze like chipped granite. Runs the Crossed Keys, Ashwick's only inn.

What She Knows: Mara remembers when the monastery fell silent—but claims no one has gone up the hill in decades. Offers free lodging “for one night only” and bolts the doors at sundown.

MOTHER TILDA

Wandering Herbalist – Elderly, swathed in shawls, with a scent of lavender and peat. Carries folk charms and mutters old prayers.

What She Knows: Tilda speaks in riddles. She warns of “a bell that tolls in dreams” and calls the players “echoes walking backwards.” Offers charms, but insists they’re useless “where names go to die.”

JONAS PIKE

Stablehand – Young, skittish, and tight-lipped unless bribed with coin or drink.

What He Knows: Claims he saw a hooded figure watching from the tree line one foggy dawn. Swears he once heard a bell ring from the hills—though no one else did.

FATHER ANSELM

Village Priest – Frail and soft-spoken, tending a small shrine older than the monastery.

What He Knows: Cautions that the monks “reached too high and fell into silence.” Holds a faded registry of those who joined Saint Hieronymus. One name matches a player’s lost loved one.

EXPLORATION AND ATMOSPHERE

Players may explore key areas of the monastery. Each is more about tone than answers. They feel watched. The silence presses closer. Something stirs beneath memory.

THE COURTYARD

Overgrown but untouched. Prayer stones lie scattered. Names on the wall of remembrance are scratched away.

- A broken statue of Saint Hieronymus—its eyes are hollow, never carved. (Foreshadowing the Eyeless Abbot)
- An empty bell tower. A frayed rope dangles, the bell long gone. (Foreshadowing the Campana Silens)

THE DORMITORIES

Neat, undisturbed. Robes hang in place. Beds are made—some still warm.

- A torn journal entry speaks of “the Bell” and “the Abbot’s final rite.”
- A name scratched into the wall matches one player’s lost loved one.

THE LIBRARY

Dust-choked and silent. Books line the shelves. A few remain open on desks.

- A history of the monastery details the monks’ pursuit of purity through silence. The final chapter is missing.
- A map shows the monastery layout, with a hidden passage marked in red from the Chapel to the crypts.

A Challenging (0) Lore check reveals the monks’ interest in silence and healing. A Difficult (+1) Lore or Investigate check reveals that a ritual involving the Campana Silens led to their downfall. On a Formidable (+2) success, the bell’s twisted purpose is uncovered.

THE CHAPEL

Dusty but intact. Candles remain. Pages of scripture are overwritten with indecipherable symbols.

- A faded inscription on the wall: “To remember is to suffer.”
- A tear-stained prayer card bearing the name of a player’s lost loved one.

A Challenging (0) Investigate check reveals the hidden passage to the crypts behind the altar.

GAME MASTER TIP

Ensure the players find the passage. If they fail the check, provide narrative cues or bonuses. Consider:

- A spectral monk silently gesturing toward the wall
- Whispers or echoes leading in that direction
- A physical shift in the environment that draws their attention

The deeper they go, the more the silence weighs. Whispers intrude. Forgotten memories rise. Even names begin to slip away.

HAUNTING INCIDENTS

Add one or two surreal moments as tension escalates:

- A note in the player’s own handwriting appears inside a hymn book—dated years before.
- A bell tolls faintly from nowhere.
- A mirror reflects not their face, but someone they lost.
- One player speaks—but no one hears them for a full minute.

- A robed figure watches from the courtyard’s edge, then vanishes.

These events should disturb without threatening. The monastery is not yet hostile—but its memory is stirring.

TONE AND PROGRESSION

This act focuses on emotional erosion, ambient dread, and the loss of certainty. No enemies appear yet. The horror is slow, quiet, and watching.

AS THE ACT ENDS, the players should have discovered the passage to the crypts, heard fragments of forgotten rites, and encountered references to the Campana Silens—a name that feels both sacred and dangerous.

ACT III – WHAT THE STONE REMEMBERS

The monastery has not given up all its secrets. Beneath the chapel, the players uncover the entrance to the crypts—a place that feels colder, older, and heavier than the rest. The silence here is absolute. Even thought seems muted. In these dark spaces, the boundaries between memory and reality unravel.

ECHOES AND ILLUSIONS

The crypts are home to echoes of those who were lost: faded fragments of monks who still linger in sorrow, guilt, or confusion (see The Spectral Monks sidebar). These are not ghosts in the traditional sense, but memory-constructs, emotional impressions impressed upon the crypt’s stone and the pressing silence.

Players may witness or interact with:

- A monk who endlessly copies names into a ledger—names the players recognise as their own.
- A vision of the final rite, led by Abbot Rian, in which the monks are stripped of their voices and vanish.
- A soundless plea scratched into the walls: “Ring the bell. Let us be.”

These encounters are emotionally exhausting but the monks do not appear hostile (until and unless the Abbot sets them on the players). Still, interacting with the monks, players must resist emotional collapse with Empathy or Will against Basic (-1) or take one Fatigue (this damage will not cause Wounds but only Fatigue).

It is possible to communicate with the monks if the players can rouse them (using Empathy or Focus against Difficult (+1) by invoking the names of their loved ones missing in the monastery. The monks may reveal fragments of the past, but their memories are fractured and incomplete. The players may also witness the final moments of the monks' lives—an echo of the ritual that erased them.

GAME MASTER TIP

The Spectral Monks are not enemies. They are echoes of the past, bound to silence and memory. Use them to create emotional tension, not combat encounters. The players should feel the weight of their presence, but not fear them. (The Abbot is the true threat.)

Communicating with the Monks is difficult, but if the players fail their attempt, give them hints that they are close and let them try again a little later. The monks are not hostile, but they are trapped in their own memories. They may respond to the players' emotional state or the names they invoke.

The Abbot's Influence is felt in the crypts. The players may experience hallucinations or visions that distort their perception of time and space. Use these to heighten the sense of unease and disorientation.

DISCOVERY OF THE BELL

Sealed behind a crumbling prayer wall lies a reliquary chamber containing the Campana Silens—a funerary bell mounted on an ancient iron frame. Its inscription is worn, but a partial phrase remains:

“To ring is to remember. To remember is to suffer.”

The bell radiates a strange, pressing warmth—like grief made tangible. As the players approach, they feel watched. Something is aware of them now.

Ringing the bell will awaken the Eyeless Abbot, ending the silence—but also drawing his full attention.

ACT IV – THE THING THAT WAITS

The final confrontation takes place in the monastery's meditation hall—a vast, domed space of worn stone and flickering memory. When the players arrive, the Eyeless Abbot is already there. He appears as a figure in faded robes, face featureless, presence overwhelming. He does not speak. He does not need to.

The silence is nearly total. Players must strain even to think.

THE EYELESS ABBOT

Without the ringing of the Campana Silens, the Abbot is untouchable. He phases through

CAMPANA SILENS

Campana Silens, the Silent Bell, is a sacred funerary relic once used to preserve the names of the dead. Forged in iron and consecrated in ancient rites, it was designed to protect memory during the final passage—ensuring the deceased would not be forgotten.

But Abbot Rian twisted its purpose. Instead of preserving memory, he used it to seal it away. The bell became an anchor for silence, stillness, and spiritual imprisonment. Now, it is the only thing capable of disrupting the unnatural peace he created.

Ringing the Bell shatters the silence, rousing the Eyeless Abbot to full awareness and drawing his spirit back into flesh and bone.

Campana Silens — Item Trait: Disrupts Spiritual Binding — the effect is on the the Abbot and the Spectral Monks and described there.

Mechanics:

- Action: A player may ring the Bell as an action. Doing so causes an immediate shift in the environment (dust, sound, collapsing illusions).
- Effect: The Eyeless Abbot becomes vulnerable to Wounds and the Spectral Monks dissolve.
- Cost: Each round after the Bell is rung, all characters gain 1 Fatigue as the veil weakens and the burden of memory floods back.

attacks, unravels identities, and suppresses voices and traits. His aura imposes a penalty on most checks and inflicts Fatigue every round as the silence presses inward.

Once the Bell is rung, a shockwave passes through the monastery. The Abbot stumbles. The silence cracks. For the first time, he can be harmed.

FIGHTING THE ABBOT

COMBAT NOTES

- The Abbot inflicts Fatigue and Wounds with spiritual pressure and memory attacks.
- He may target a player's sense of identity, suppressing one of their Traits temporarily.
- The longer the fight continues, the more unstable the monastery becomes. Consider adding crumbling terrain, flickering visions, or summoned echoes.

Players may try to invoke the memory of their lost loved one to resist or reverse the Abbot's erasure. These moments should be emotionally charged, and may grant a +2 bonus on key rolls or allow a Trait to refresh mid-combat.

VICTORY AND AFTERMATH

If the Abbot is defeated, the silence lifts. The monastery shifts—either collapsing or fading fully into ruin. The players may hear one final toll of the bell as the spirits finally pass on. If the players fail, they are absorbed into the stillness. Their identities fade. They remain in the monastery, their names forgotten, their stories unwritten.

LINGERING ECHOES BOUND IN SILENCE

THE SPECTRAL MONKS

They were once devout, seekers of peace through silence. Now they are fragments—flickering memories and slivers of spirit trapped in the monastery's stone. Some weep. Some pray. Some watch. None speak. When the Eyeless Abbot awakens, they move as one.

BACKGROUND:

The monks of Saint Hieronymus were erased in a ritual that unmade their identities. What remains are shadows of faith, bound to silence and shaped by the Abbot's will. They appear during exploration as passive apparitions—repeating rituals, writing forgotten names, or standing motionless in empty rooms.

INTERACTION:

They cannot be spoken to directly, but a player invoking a lost loved one's name may draw one to echo a memory or reveal a clue (requiring an Empathy roll at Difficult (+1)).

COMBAT:

The monks are not hostile, but can be controlled by the Eyeless Abbot, and if called to fight the players will use Focus + Silent Scream (Trait) as spiritual attacks. The Abbot will summon one per player character if there is a confrontation and Campana Silens has not yet been rung.

Since the Spectral Monks can only cause Fatigue Stress, they are not a direct threat. They will give the players a scare if they hammer away the players' Fatigue quickly, but the monks cannot kill any player character. Using them to drain half the players' Stress points during the confrontation with the Abbot is a good way to make the players feel the weight of the silence, but they should still be able to flee from such a fight relatively unharmed (and the Fatigue points will come back as soon as the fight is over).

Once the Campana Silens is rung, the Spectral Monks will be freed from their spectral existence, the souls of the monks will be released, and they will pass on to the afterlife, disappearing from the story.

Novice (+1): Awareness

Traits

Spectral Silence — The Spectral Monks cannot be attacked or harmed until the Campana Silens is rung. They are bound to the silence of the monastery and cannot leave its grounds.

Silent Screams — The Spectral Monks can use Focus to attack players with a Silence effect. This attack is not physical but spiritual, causing the player to lose their voice and take Fatigue Stress. The attack cannot cause Wounds. The player may roll Will to resist.

SILENCE INCARNATE

THE EYELESS ABBOT

Once Abbot Rian, a devout spiritual leader who sought to transcend worldly identity through perfect silence. He succeeded far too well. What remains is not a man, but a vessel of stillness—an unspoken wound in the fabric of memory.

BACKGROUND:

The Eyeless Abbot lingers at the heart of Saint Hieronymus Monastery, an immovable anchor of grief and spiritual ruin. During a failed rite meant to dissolve the self, he bound his own soul—and those of his brethren—into a silence so deep it became a presence. He does not see, does not speak, and cannot be harmed by mortal means. Only the toll of the Campana Silens can pull him into reach of the living.

COMBAT:

He does not attack with blade or fire. Instead, he erases names, memories, connections—all fade in his wake. To fight him is to fight forgetting itself.

The Abbot uses Focus to attack players. This attack is not physical but spiritual, but unlike with the Spectral Monks, the Abbot can cause Wounds as well as Fatigue.

Since the players cannot attack back when the Abbot is in his spectra form, any battle is one-sided, and the players can be killed if they keep up fighting. Especially if the Abbot summons Spectral Monks who can drain the players of their Fatigue after which the Abbot can cause wounds.

The players can flee, however, and the Abbot (and the Spectral Monks) will not chase them out of the monastery. If they flee, their fatigue will recover, and they can return.

To defeat the Abbot, however, the players must ring the Campana Silens. This is the only way to turn the spiritual form of the Abbot into a corporeal form that they can defeat. If they do, the Abbot loses the support of the Spectral Monks, and with his limited Stress boxes he will not be much of a challenge after that.

- Expert (+3): Will
Skilled (+2): Focus, Insight

Traits

Silence Hungers — At the start of each round, all player characters suffer 1 Fatigue unless they succeed on a Challenging (0) Will or Focus. This Trait can only affect Fatigue and not Wounds.

Untouchable Form — The Abbot is immune to all harm unless the Campana Silens has been rung. Once it has, this Trait is suppressed.

Aura of Dread — Characters in the Abbot's presence take a -1 penalty to all rolls. This Trait is suppressed once the Campana Silens has been rung.

DR. CLARA ASHCROFT

“Some stories are not told. They are buried. And they bleed through the silence.”

A cultural anthropologist specialising in ritual practice and memory, Clara Ashcroft is quiet, meticulous, and emotionally withdrawn. Her life's work revolves around forgotten spiritual sites and fringe religious communities, but her most personal mystery lies within Saint Hieronymus. Years ago, her younger sister, Evelyn, joined the monastery's contemplative program—and was never heard from again.

BACKGROUND

Clara was a senior lecturer at a university in Edinburgh, well-regarded for her research into memory, ritual, and folk beliefs. When Evelyn disappeared, Clara left academia behind and began investigating isolated monasteries, vanished communes, and other places where silence clings. Her work has become solitary and obsessive—an academic pursuit turned personal.

APPEARANCE

Clara wears a long, functional raincoat with a laptop bag or field satchel always over her shoulder. Her hair is loosely tied, and she favours muted colours. Her eyes are sharp, but tired. She's often mistaken for a journalist or archaeologist—but speaks like someone who's seen too much.

PERSONALITY

Clara is thoughtful, distant, and deeply rational—but beneath her composed surface is a raw grief she's never allowed herself to feel. She treats emotion like data, but the closer she comes to the truth, the harder that becomes. She avoids connection but is fiercely protective once it's made.

CONNECTION TO THE MONASTERY

Evelyn Ashcroft disappeared at Saint Hieronymus while participating in a modern-day spiritual retreat. Clara always suspected something was wrong—but had no proof, no access. Now, the letter has given her the first lead in nearly twenty years.

GOALS

Clara seeks to uncover what happened to her sister, and by doing so, expose the truth about the monastery's silence. She also hopes, secretly, to find some version of forgiveness—for Evelyn, and for herself.

Novice (+1): Awareness, Empathy, Focus

Traits

Driven to Understand — Gain a +2 bonus when analysing ritual, folklore, or spiritual mechanisms.

Buried Guilt — Once per session, may clear all Fatigue after confronting a painful memory. The memory must be shared aloud to the group. Confronting the painful memory takes one combat action.

Cold Logic, Quiet Grief — Reroll a failed Insight or Empathy check related to grief or memory.

ISAAC BELLAMY

"The war ended, but not for me. Some fights just change their shape."

A former infantryman turned private security contractor, Isaac Bellamy is a man carved out of trauma and silence. After years spent in conflict zones, he returned to find his younger brother—his only family—had gone to Saint Hieronymus on a spiritual retreat. That was the last he ever heard from him.

BACKGROUND

Isaac joined the military straight out of school and served multiple tours before transitioning into high-risk private security work. He's seen what silence can mean in a firefight, and what it can hide in grief. His brother Elijah sought peace at the monastery after a breakdown—Isaac always feared it was a cult in disguise. When the place went quiet, Isaac went searching... but never found anything. Until now.

APPEARANCE

Isaac wears a weathered field jacket, dark jeans, and durable hiking boots. His close-cropped hair and guarded stance mark him as someone used to danger. A locket with Elijah's photo hangs around his neck, worn from years of handling.

PERSONALITY

Isaac is blunt, steady, and doesn't waste words. He's not easily rattled—but his silence isn't peace, it's armor. Loyalty means everything to him, and guilt weighs heavy on his shoulders. He's used to being the one who makes the hard choices when no one else will.

CONNECTION TO THE MONASTERY

Elijah Bellamy disappeared after joining a silent spiritual retreat hosted by Saint Hieronymus. Isaac never trusted it. When the monastery ceased all communication, he came looking. Now, years later, the letter has cracked the silence wide open.

GOALS

Isaac wants the truth about what happened to his brother. He's not afraid of ghosts, only of failing someone he loved—again. If he has to fight the dark to get answers, so be it.

MARGOT DELANEY

“Faith asks us to believe. But no one tells you what to do when belief breaks.”

Margot Delaney is a former nurse and lifelong believer who once placed her hope in Saint Hieronymus Monastery. Years ago, her teenage daughter Eleanor was sent there to recover from a breakdown. When the monastery fell silent, so did the answers. Margot was told to let go. She never did.

BACKGROUND

Margot worked in palliative care for over twenty years, walking others through the long process of grief. She once found strength in faith, but the unanswered questions around her daughter's disappearance cracked something inside her. She left the church, left her job, and began quietly investigating on her own—looking for signs, for records, for anything the silence couldn't bury.

APPEARANCE

Margot wears a wool coat, boots, and practical layers—dressed for wind and wet ground. Her hair is pulled back neatly, with strands of grey at the temples. She carries a single worn photograph in her coat pocket, and her expression often lingers between sorrow and resolve.

PERSONALITY

Calm, warm, and unshakably determined. Margot is the kind of person others lean on—until they realise she's carrying more weight than she shows. She speaks softly, but never vaguely. When she commits to something, she sees it through.

CONNECTION TO THE MONASTERY

Margot sent her daughter Eleanor to Saint Hieronymus for spiritual healing after a mental health crisis. She visited twice. On the third attempt, she was told the monastery had closed its gates. No further contact was ever made.

GOALS

Margot wants the truth—not just for Eleanor, but for herself. She seeks closure, but also understanding. She hopes to find proof that her daughter mattered—that her story didn't simply vanish.

MICAH RIOS

"It's not the dead that scare me. It's what they remember—and what they want us to forget."

Micah Rios has always been able to feel the echo of things left unfinished. Whether it's ghosts, trauma, or silence itself, something in him is tuned to it. He never sought this gift—but when the letter arrived, written in the hand of an uncle who vanished before Micah was born, he knew exactly where he had to go.

BACKGROUND

Micah grew up in foster care, always knowing he was “sensitive” in a way that others weren’t. He’s spent time working at grief support groups, volunteering in spiritual communities, and studying dream psychology. He doesn’t talk much about his family—but he keeps a journal full of sketches and messages from dreams he hasn’t told anyone about.

APPEARANCE

Micah wears layered, practical clothes—a denim jacket over a hoodie, worn boots, and a small crystal pendant. He often pauses mid-thought, distracted by something no one else noticed. His calm voice hides a deep current of unease.

PERSONALITY

Empathetic and soft-spoken, Micah avoids conflict but isn’t afraid of difficult truths. He’s open-minded, intuitive, and carries himself like someone used to not being believed. Despite everything, he genuinely wants to help others find peace—because he’s never quite known it himself.

CONNECTION TO THE MONASTERY

Micah’s mother never spoke of her brother, but he appeared in Micah’s dreams for years. When the letter arrived in that uncle’s handwriting, Micah knew it wasn’t just a coincidence. Something old is calling to him—and he may be the only one who can hear it clearly.

GOALS

Micah wants to understand what’s haunting the monastery—not just for his uncle’s sake, but to better understand his own strange connection to death and memory. If he can help others find peace, maybe he can find some of his own.

NINA MADDOX

"There's always a reason. Even if you don't like what it is."

Nina Maddox doesn't believe in ghosts. Or at least, she doesn't admit to it. A freelance investigator with a background in private security, Nina specialises in cleaning up messes no one wants to admit exist. She's not here because she believes in hauntings—she's here because someone thought she should be.

BACKGROUND

Nina served in law enforcement before moving into private security and missing persons work. She's seen cults, hoaxes, and grieving families manipulated by con artists. When she got a letter from her estranged father—dead over a decade—she assumed it was a prank. Still, she couldn't ignore the place it mentioned: Saint Hieronymus Monastery. She'd heard of it before, in the case files she was never supposed to read.

APPEARANCE

Short-cropped hair, sharp eyes, and a lean, athletic build. Nina dresses in a leather jacket and cargo jeans, always carrying a duffel with tools, water, and a flashlight. She walks like someone who's used to being underestimated—and making people regret it.

PERSONALITY

Blunt, sceptical, and resourceful. Nina doesn't buy into rituals or spirits, but she respects grief—and she knows that sometimes, belief can be more dangerous than truth. She doesn't scare easy, but what she finds at the monastery might just shake that.

CONNECTION TO THE MONASTERY

Her father investigated Saint Hieronymus decades ago and never spoke of it again. His death was ruled a suicide. The letter bearing his handwriting simply said: "They never let me leave. Maybe you can."

GOALS

Nina wants to find the source of the monastery's silence and put it to rest—by force, if necessary. She doesn't believe in ghosts, but she does believe in justice. And if there's something still trapped there, it's about to find out what she's made of.

Skills

- Expert (+3): Fight
Skilled (+2): Awareness, Focus
Novice (+1): Will, Investigation, Insight

Traits

- No-Nonsense Grit — Gain a bonus when pushing through fear, injury, or disbelief.
Professional Instincts — Reroll a failed Awareness or Investigation check tied to danger or traps.
Break the Pattern — Once per session, ignore the effects of a supernatural influence for one round.
